The screenshot shows the Chrome Web Store interface for the 'Full Page Screen Capture' extension. At the top, there is a header with the extension name, a 'Full Page Screen Capture' logo, and a blue 'ADD TO CHROME' button. Below the header, there are tabs for 'OVERVIEW', 'REVIEWS', 'SUPPORT', and 'RELATED'. The 'SUPPORT' tab is active, showing a 'Rectangular Snip' link. The main content area features a large image of a browser window with a tooltip that reads: 'For best results, don't mouse over the page during capture. It will open in a new window once finished.' To the right of the image, there is a 'Compatible with your device' badge and a detailed description of the extension's functionality. Below the description, there are links for 'Website' and 'Report Abuse', and a section for 'Additional Information' which includes the version number (2.2), update date (September 1, 2016), size (1.52MIB), and language (English (United States)).

Compatible with your device

Capture a screenshot of your current page in entirety and reliably—without requesting any extra permissions!

The simplest way to take a full page screenshot of your current browser window. Click on the extension in your browser bar (or press Alt+Shift+P), watch the extension capture each part of the page, and be transported to a new tab of your image that you can right-click to save-as or just drag to your desktop. No bloat, no ads, just a simple way to turn a full web page into an image.

The only way to screenshot the entire page
